Short Bio

JeLa is an indie-pop artist whose songs turn heartbreak into healing. Blending raw honesty with shimmering melodies, she crafts music that's cinematic, emotional, and undeniably human.

Full Bio

JeLa is a New York-based singer-songwriter and recording artist known for her emotive vocals, evocative lyrics, and modern pop sound that fuses vulnerability with power. After years writing for other artists and toplining for top DJ's and producers, JeLa stepped into her own spotlight—releasing a steady stream of singles that have drawn in over 500,000 monthly Spotify listeners and over 30 million streams worldwide.

Her songs explore love, loss, and rebirth through an honest lens, blending organic storytelling with lush pop production. Whether she's whispering over piano or soaring through synth-driven choruses, JeLa captures the kind of emotion that lingers long after the music fades.

"I write songs that turn heartbreak into healing," says JeLa. "Every lyric is a little piece of truth dressed up in melody."

With her latest releases — "It's Better When We Don't Talk," "Funeral," and "How Could I Forget" — JeLa continues to define her unique voice in the modern pop landscape: authentic and unapologetically real.

Recent Releases

"Two Hearts" – Released August 2025 is a hauntingly beautiful track about grief, closure, and transformation — where letting go becomes an act of love.

"It's Better When We Don't Talk" – Released September 2025 is an upbeat duet with American Idol finalist Robbie Rosen.

"Funeral" – Released September 2025: Sultry and defiant, Funeral is a song about reclaiming your story and finding power in imperfection.

“How Could I Forget” – Released October 2025: Is about how times changes everything except the way some memories feel. It’s not a breakup song, but rather a thank you to someone who mattered.
